What I Want my Family to Know Kevin Carr

Time passes quickly. Life envelops us so completely that we do not think to pass on what we wish our family to know about ourselves, and more importantly of God.

When we say I love you, it comes out quickly, and can leave behind an infinite number of words that may never be conveyed. As a result, many words are left unsaid before we pass on.

I earnestly prayed for some 30 years to be able to pass on information about God to my father; each time he would stop me and reject what I was saying. He knew the Gospel I wanted him to hear was a difficult one, and he was not ready to hear it. However, God had something planned, something wonderful, powerful – a sight shared by a few; an event which gave hope to all.
