Excerpt from A Critical Study of the Various Dates Assigned to the Birth of Christopher Columbus: The Real Date, 1451; With a Bibliography of the Question

The question as to the date of the birth of Columbus is one of the most controversial among those bearing upon the beginning of his career, which is far from lacking in points of obscurity. Neither Columbus himself, nor his son Ferdinand, nor Las Casas furnishes us with any definite light on this subject.

At different times Columbus mentions the age he had attained at certain memorable periods of his life, and it might, at the first blush, be thought that therefrom we should be able to deduce the necessary ailments for resolving the problem; but when the attempt is made it is found to result in nothing, inasmuch as his statements are self-contradictory.
